Leaflet title: Alcohol Advice Last review: July 2022 Expiry date: July 2024

Introduction

If you have been in hospital because of problems relating to alcohol, stopping drinking alcohol seems like a sensible idea. If you have had an alcohol detox, there will no longer be physical signs of withdrawal from alcohol the only withdrawal will be a psychological craving.

This leaflet is designed to give you tips and ideas to help you stay off alcohol and, to give you some information about alcohol related issues.

Coping strategies

First, when discharged get rid of all your alcohol (unless told otherwise). If people, you live with still drink ask them to keep it out of sight. Do not buy alcohol for anyone else – let them buy their own ask everyone around you to stop offering it to you.

Stay away from environments associated with alcohol. That includes the local pub, off licence and your drinking friends flat. Being around alcohol may put you at risk of relapse. Even if this does not happen first or second time evidence shows that sooner or later relapse may happen. You may feel confident and proud of your willpower but being around temptation, feelings of discomfort, craving and resentment may become too much.

Structure your day and establish routine. Get up and go to bed at a set time. Consider other ways of spending your day there are plenty of activities that don't involve alcohol. Allow time for your recovery, attend help groups, and contact others in recovery.

Eat well, eat regular meals, if you feel full you are less likely to want a drink of alcohol. Make sure you have breakfast; this will make cravings less likely, by maintaining your blood sugar level. This will also reduce the risk of irritability due to low blood sugar levels. Try to eat a healthy diet with plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables. If you crave sugar eat fruit and treat yourself to some chocolate. Don't worry about putting on weight you are probably consuming fewer calories than when you were drinking.

Do some physical activity; walk, swim, bike ride, get down to the gym! Start looking after your body. This will give you energy, relieve aches and pain, improve sleep, and help you to relax.

Learn to relax by having a soak in the bath, listen to music, read a book, or try a yoga class at your local community centre.

Don't get too tired as you are more likely to feel vulnerable and irritable when you are tired. Allow yourself time to rest and get plenty of sleep.

Don't expect too much of yourself, take one day at a time. Don't rush to make too many plans and try not to be impatient and get everything sorted at once.

Take time to accept your feelings. You may have been used to alcohol to numb your feelings. When you were drinking, your feelings were not normal. They were affected by the amount of alcohol you were drinking, and by the tension and anxiety you felt. Now that you have stopped drinking you may feel up one minute and down the next. As time goes by these mood swings will eventually level out. Don't use anger, guilt or depression as an excuse to drink; drink will only make these feelings even worse, as you will also feel you have let yourself down.

Protect your recovery, be selfish and don't get involved with anybody else's problems. Also stay away from people who undermine your recovery (possibly your drinking friends). The longer you can go without a drink the stronger you will get, and your chances of avoiding a relapse are better. Remember you are in charge of your life and have sole responsibility as to whether you pick up a drink!

Don't expect too much from other people, like recovery trust will take time to develop. Also you cannot expect others to change their thinking or lifestyle just because you have.

On Discharge from hospital you may have been prescribed Vitamin B and Thiamine. These are important vitamins to help in your recovery; they can prevent nerve damage or alcohol dementia so they should be continued until instructed by your GP to stop. You may also be prescribed Acamprosate; this is a drug that has been shown to double abstinence in people receiving treatment for alcohol dependence.

Also on discharge you would have been asked if you wished to be referred to the community alcohol team. If at the time you decided this was not for you, but have changed your mind, self-referrals can be made. See contact details overleaf.

Ask 3 Questions

Become more involved in decisions about your healthcare. You may be asked to make choices about your treatment. To begin with, try to make sure you get the answers to three key questions:

- 1. What are my options?
- 2. What are the positives and negatives of each option for me?
- 3. How do I get support to help me make a decision that is right for me?
