What is the role of the Skin Macmillan Support Worker?

The Skin Macmillan Support Worker is part of the skin team, working alongside the Skin Cancer Nurse Specialists (keyworkers) and providing a service to patients and their families who have been given a diagnosis of a skin cancer.

The Support Worker provides support to the team and other healthcare professionals by dealing with no complex tasks, to allow the registered practitioners to focus their expertise on managing the complex needs.

The Skin Macmillan Support Worker interacts directly with people affected by skin cancer, providing emotional and practical support, either face to face, by telephone or email; also assisting cancer patients navigate the health and social care system, and signposting to existing support in the community.

The Macmillan Support Worker actively works with patients to identify and address concerns using a Holistic Needs Assessment. Following the assessment, a care plan is implemented to facilitate the self-management of the patients care.

The Support Worker can offer:

- Direct contact to the Skin Cancer Services
- Referral to other services as needs require
- Support group meetings
- Health and wellbeing events
- Holistic Needs Assessments
- Comfort calls for emotional support
- Providing basic advice and support for self-management

Ask 3 Questions

Become more involved in decisions about your healthcare. You may be asked to make choices about your treatment. To begin with, try to make sure you get the answers to three key questions:

1. What are my options?
2. What are the positives and negatives of each option for me?
3. How do I get support to help me make a decision that is right for me?
